ComStage Bund-Future Leveraged UCITS ETF

The ComStage Bund-Future Leveraged UCITS ETF is an exchange-traded investment fund (Exchange Traded Fund, "ETF") linked to the performance of the Solactive Bund Daily (2x) Leveraged Index. ComStage ETFs combine the advantages of a traditional investment fund and the tradability of a stock. The EU Fund Directive „UCITS" stipulates that all fund inventory are segregated assets ("Sondervermögen"). Should an investment company file for insolvency, ETF assets are not affected because they are held in an account separated from the asset manager's balance sheet. The Net Asset Value (NAV) of an ETF is calculated daily by the custodian bank independently. ComStage ETFs are traded continuously on several stock exchanges just like equities. Other than actively managed funds, ETFs do not charge entry and exit fees when traded via stock exchanges. Instead transaction costs apply as with standard equity trades. ETFs can also be traded over-the-counter (OTC) through market makers.

Index description

The Solactive Bund Daily (2x) Leveraged is a strategy linked to the performance of the Euro-Bund future (Reuters code: FGBLc1). The strategy reflects the performance of an daily investment with a double long position in the Euro-Bund future plus interest, based on the EONIA rate, on any capital that is not tied up.
It works as follows: the strategy will rise if interest rates for 10-year bonds fall, and the strategy will fall if interest rates for 10-year bonds rise. The strategy generates approximately double the performance of the Bund future on a daily basis.

Please note that for holding periods of more than one day, the performance of the leverage index does not match the double performance of the base index due to the daily calculation basis.

The starting level of the index was set at 1000 index points on 4 January 2010.

The index of the sub-fund is a Total Return index, i.e. the index calculation includes dividends for the index components.
